

A powder struggle in 'My Beautiful Laundrette'.

bits with an axe so that she can provide 'some good barbecue.' By this time the other guests have realised it may not be such a good idea to stick around and partake in this scatological It's A Knockout themselves, so they plan a daring escape. But the locals are having 'More fun than a Beagle dog on a coon hunt' and there's a rush on sharp instruments at the general stores as they set off in pursuit. Make no mistake, there's a lot of butchery here, but unfortunately most of it has been done by the censor. All the graphic gore scenes are chopped out, leaving the discriminating horror buff very little, apart from the opportunity of seeing 'Playboy's Favourite Playmate of 1964' Connie Mason giving her best performance, and the chance to listen to some foot-tappin' tunes — 'Oh the South's gonna' rise again!' — hand me that axe Slim...

AB

MY BEAUTIFUL LAUNDRETTE/Virgin/

Saeed Jaffrey, Daniel Day Lewis/15/93 min

★★★★★

An alternative title for this film could have been This Is England. Its savage realism and up-front handling of contemporary moral issues (like racism and homosexuality) set against a backdrop of suburban houses and city slums hits one with a stark reality that is seldom witnessed on celluloid. Originally filmed for Channel 4, Laundrette went down so well at the Edinburgh Festival that its producers decided to give it a theatrical release — a shrewd move. The London cinemas have been choc-a-block since its release and the endless flow of punters still shows no signs of abating.

Omar is a Westernised Pakistani with no job and no prospects. He lives in a run-down tenement block with his alcoholic father performing his daily chores with surprisingly little fuss. It's a grim existence, but help comes in the jovial form of uncle Nasser. Rich, affluent and generous to a fault, Nasser provides Omar with a menial job. He's a good worker and soon wins his uncle's admiration. Becoming increasingly fond of the boy Nasser keeps gracing him with more responsibilities until he eventually agrees to give him a shot at running his dilapidated laundrette. 'There's no money in it' he warns, but Omar is determined to give it a go.

Meanwhile, Omar has bumped into Johnny. A friend from years ago, the pair drifted apart when Omar discovered Johnny's affiliation with the National Front. Regretting his wasted youth Johnny agrees to help Omar renovate (and eventually co-manage) the laundrette, which they soon transform into a haven for the local dirty washing brigade.

I've only picked out the bare bones of the plot for two reasons. One, I don't want to give too much away (there are a number of shocks in store) and two, there's so much going on throughout — and so many peripheral characters — that it would take a whole page to detail a full review. In fact, reading back over this it all sounds remarkably drab, but I can assure you that Laundrette is infused with a wry sense of humour that successfully takes the edge off some of the more controversial scenes. Sometimes brutal, occasionally shocking, always truthful — I can't recommend it highly enough.

SS

Reviews by Neil Bailey,
Allan Bryce and Steven Shields.

A MAN IN A HAT

.... called Harrison Ford.
Okay, so we couldn't think of a decent title for this star profile by Allan Bryce and the Art Ed came up with this one.
No-one's perfect...

Harrison Ford's film career started off rather poorly. After his first picture, a studio boss took him to one side and said: 'The first time Tony Curtis was in a movie, he delivered a bag of groceries. We took one look at him and we knew he was a movie star. You, kid, just ain't got it.' But Ford wasn't dissuaded: 'When a guy delivers groceries' he told the big-wig, 'you're supposed to think he's delivering groceries, not that he's a movie star.'

It's easy to understand what the executive meant though, because Harrison Ford looked, at first glance, an unlikely contender for superstar status, and even today, after the Star Wars and Indiana Jones series have made him one of the most popular screen personalities in the world, he can still walk down the street without being recognised. 'I like to blend into the background, like a chameleon,' he says. 'I don't behave the way stars are supposed to behave. I don't attract attention'. He certainly doesn't live the traditional movie star life either. Despite his fantastic wealth, his home is a modest wooden chalet-style house without a swimming pool in the hills near

Los Angeles, where he and his wife, screenwriter Melissa (E.T.) Mathison live very privately. He even built a lot of his own furniture!

Born on July 13, 1942, of an Irish mother and a Russian father, Harrison Ford decided to become an actor after flunking out of Wisconsin's Ripon College in his senior year — 'A career in show business seemed a logical choice when it became clear I was going to fail academically' he stated. Then he pursued his chosen ambition by moving from New York to Hollywood, where 'it wasn't so damn cold' and picking up small appearances on television shows like Gunsmoke, Ironside and The Virginian. He started out as Harrison J. Ford (because there was a silent film actor with the same name), supplementing his meagre income from acting by taking on carpentry jobs for the Hollywood stars. At this time it was fair to say he made more from his woodworking skills than his bit parts in pictures like Dead Heat On A Merry Go Round (1966) — his first movie appearance — where he was a bell boy with one thing to say to star James Coburn: 'Paging Mr Jones! Paging Mr Jones!'

Similarly tiny roles in mediocre pictures like Journey To Shiloh and The Long Ride Home (1968) didn't gain him much recognition with movie fans, and when his only line in Antonioni's mystical 1970 production Zabriskie Point ended up on the cutting room floor, Ford became even more convinced that he should give up the film business and go into carpentry full time. Nevertheless he decided to stick it out for a little while longer. He took a tiny part in the Elliott Gould comedy Getting Straight (1971) before landing his first substantial role, in George Lucas' popular youth movie American Graffiti. He was spotted by producer Fred Roos while doing some odd-job carpentry around the Universal Studio offices and cast as Bob Falfa, the ace driver who blows into a small California town one hot night in 1962 to challenge the local top dog (Paul Le Mat) to an illegal road race.

Ford and Sean Young...

American Graffiti was a massive commercial and critical hit, but careerwise it didn't help Ford as much as it did its more prominent stars like Richard Dreyfuss, Ron Howard and Candy Clark. Nevertheless it was a step in the right direction, and more importantly marked the beginning of the actor's association with George Lucas, the talented filmmaker who would one day help him find success on a scale he had never even dreamed about.

Though nobody at this stage had yet entertained the idea that Harrison Ford (he dropped the J. in 1970 when his silent film actor namesake died) could be star material, he did start to pick up more substantial roles in better movies, such as Francis Ford Coppola's The Conversation (CIC-1974). This was a tingling thriller in which Gene Hackman starred as surveillance expert Harry Caul ('the best bugger in the business') who tapes a conversation in a crowded New York park that has dreadful consequences for both himself and the people involved. Ford contributed a memorable performance, once again in a villainous mould, as Martin Stett, the chilling corporate hatchet man who seems to follow Hackman around. Then came some equally meaty roles in television movies like Dynasty (not the famed soap opera series) opposite Stacy Keach and Sarah Miles, The Trial of Lt. Calley for director Stanley Kramer, and The Possessed (EIV) with James Farentino and Joan Hackett.

With Kelly McGillis in 'Witness'.

The kind of parts he was now getting were a step in the right direction, but not enough to convince him he should give up his other job. In fact he was becoming so disillusioned with his acting career that when his friend George Lucas came along to him with the offer of playing space pilot Han Solo in his ambitious Star Wars project he very nearly turned the part down because it paid less than he was earning making furniture! But Lucas sweetened the deal by throwing in a percentage of the profits — and when the film became the biggest money spinner of all time it made Ford wealthy enough to put down his carpentry tools forever.

The Star Wars (CBS/Fox-1977) phenomenon also turned him overnight into a box-office force to be reckoned with. Though Mark Hamill's Luke Skywalker was supposedly the hero of the film there was little doubt that the public responded more to Ford's cocky space rogue, piloting his battered ship The Millennium Falcon through some hair-raising battles without blinking an eyelid. The critics who had previously ignored him were now comparing his acting to that of Bogart and Gary Cooper, and suddenly he could pick and choose what parts he wanted to play. There were to be no more thankless supporting roles. He was suddenly a superstar.

Unfortunately his next few roles did not help him build on his Star Wars popularity. As a sympathetic military man trying to track down disturbed Vietnam veteran Henry Winkler in Heroes (CIC) he played second fiddle to The Fonz and the talented Sally Field in an underwritten part. Then Peter (Capricorn One) Hyams' overblown romance Hanover Street (RCA/Columbia) saw him miscast as an American pilot stationed in wartime London embarking on a torrid affair with Lesley Anne Down. Souped up with lovely photography and a lush John Barry score, the film seemed almost a caricature of the Waterloo Bridge, Brief Encounter type melodramas it so obviously sought to emulate. Then Force Ten From Navarone turned out to be a far from worthy sequel to the great British war picture of the 60s, reviving some of Alistair MacLean's characters for a new spot of Jerry bashing — this time destroying a bridge in Yugoslavia. Ford was once more landed with a colourless role as a ruthless American commando, and the film was only a modest box office success.

...get closer in Ridley Scott's 'Bladerunner'.

Better things were in store for him in a more ambitious kind of war epic: Francis Coppola's long-awaited Apocalypse Now (CIC) offered him a smaller part, but he made quite an impact as the chilling CIA man who briefs reluctant hero Martin Sheen on his assignment to journey into the jungle hell of Cambodia and 'terminate with extreme prejudice' the mad Marlon Brando. After this he tried his hand at comedy in the Gene Wilder romp The Frisco Kid (Warner), which had him as a gunfighter joining forces with a Polish rabbi (Wilder) to help him make his way across America during the days of the gold-rush. This had its moments, and Ford's performance was suitably light and intriguing, but under Robert (The Choirboys) Aldrich's uncertain direction the film turned out to be a rather pointless exercise and, not surprisingly, a box office flop.

The problem with all the roles Ford had taken immediately after Star Wars was that none of them seemed to capture that roguish heroic charm he had brought to the character of Han Solo. He seemed in danger of fading back into obscurity if he didn't find the right part soon, and obviously realising this he signed up, albeit reluctantly, to play Solo again in The Empire Strikes Back (CBS/Fox 1980). The Star Wars sequel was predictably a mega hit, grossing almost as much as the original, and Ford was once more top of the pops as far as filmgoers were concerned. But he couldn't base his act around just one movie series if he wanted to find steady work as an actor for many years to come. He didn't want to be recognised only as Han Solo, nor did he wish to permanently play second fiddle to extravagant special effects. It was at this point that Indiana Jones came into his life.

The Empire Strikes Back had been written by Lawrence Kasdan, a newcomer whose work had impressed producer George Lucas so much that he hired him immediately afterwards to help flesh out an idea he had for a film based on the old cliffhanger movie serials he so much enjoyed as a kid. Kasdan came up with a screenplay called Raiders of the Lost Ark (CIC), about a bunch of Nazis hunting for the mystical Lost Ark of the Covenant, whose supernatural power will help Hitler win the war. The only person who can save the free world is Indiana Jones, a fairly mild mannered school teacher who also happens to be one of the world's greatest adventurers and an absolute expert in archaeology — and he's no slouch with a bullwhip either! For the role of Jones, Lucas first approached rugged American actor Tom Selleck, but he had just signed up to do a series called Magnum P.I. and was not available for some time to come. With three weeks to go before filming was set to commence, Lucas asked Harrison Ford if he'd like the part. 'Why not?' shrugged the actor.

And so a new and even more famous character was added to Ford's repertoire. Indiana Jones became everybody's favourite screen hero when the irresistible blend of thrills, spills and humour which was Raiders turned out to be an instant worldwide success, grossing some 25 million dollars in its first four weeks of American release. 'It was one of the fastest films I have ever made,' said Ford, referring to the hectic 77 day shooting schedule — 'and one of the toughest! I hurt myself making that film more than any other time in my life.' Cracking that bullwhip nearly put his shoulder out once or twice, and he performed many of the movie's most dangerous stunts himself, even to the extent of sharing the floor at Pinewood studios with thousands of snakes. Jones is supposed to be mortally afraid of them, but Harrison Ford wasn't too worried — 'I quite like them. It's big spiders I can't stand' he joked afterwards.

Ironically, one of the movie's best scenes came about quite by accident on a day when the star was suffering from

Fantastic Low, Low

The Big

Popular Top Titles

ONLY £19.95 each

Terms of Endearment
Trading Places
The 2000 Year Old Man
The Snowman
Orn & Cheep Voltron — Defender of — the Universe
1001 Rabbit Tales
Video Rewind —
Rolling Stones
This is Elvis
American Gigolo
Torvill and Dean
Going Steady
Scum
Phantasm
The Jungle Book (Sabu)
Plague
Clonus
Barracuda
Final Executioner
Jungle Bunker
Inglorious Bastards
Footloose
Staying Alive
Flashdance
Jaws
Airplane
Airplane II
Raiders of the Lost Ark
An Officer & A Gentleman

Star Wars
Quadrophonia
The Kids are Alright
An American Werewolf in — London
Convoy
Saturday Night Fever
Xanadu
Grease
Grease II
Jesus Christ — Superstar
Looking for Mr. Goodbar
Days of Heaven
Secret Policemans Ball
Lemon Popsicle
Going Steady
Wind in the Willows
Looney Tunes Vols 1-20
(£19.95 each)
Pink Panther Cartoons
Gregory's Girl
Secret Policeman's Other Ball
McVicar
The Red Arrows
World At War (13 cassettes)
26 parts — 2 episodes per tape
£19.95 each cassette
Falklands — Task Force South
The Third Man
Blackmail (Hitchcock)
Bernard Manning Ungagged

Warner's Budget Titles

ONLY £21.95 each

The Arrangement
Blume in Love
Satanic Rites of Dracula
Dracula AD 1972
Hound Of The Baskervilles
(Hammer)
When Dinosaurs Ruled Earth
Hot Potato
Khartoum
Topkapi
Watch On The Rhine
Support Your Local Sheriff
Support Your Local Gunfighter

How To Murder Your Wife
How To Succeed In Business —
Without Really Trying Start The Revolution Without Me
The Life & Times Of — Judge Roy Bean
Ned Kelly
Kes
The Hospital
Bring Me The Head Of —
Alfredo Garcia
Stand Up Virgin Soldiers
In Praise Of Older Women
Doc
What Do You Say —
To A Naked Lady

WARNER BROS Box Office Smashes

All at £49.95 each
Raging Bull
Love, Honour & Obeys
Romantic Comedy
Red Dawn
The Beast Within Tight Rope
Pandemonium
Purple Rain
Purple Hearts
Cal
Hearts & Armour
Deal Of The Century
The House Where Evil Dwells
Galaxy of Terror
The Man with Two Brains
Police Academy
Yentl
The Right Stuff
Of Unknown Origin
Greystoke — Legend of Tarzan
Risky Business
Excalibur
Firefox
Sudden Impact
War Games
The French
Lieutenant's Woman
Rocky 2
Rocky 3
Never Say Never Again
Octopussy
Mad Max
Mad Max 2
Blade Runner

The Final Countdown
Schizo
Midnight Cowboy
A Fistful of Dollars
For a Few Dollars More
Hang 'Em High
Rocky
Dogs Of War
The Good, The Bad & The Ugly
The Outlaw Josey Wales
Curse Of The Pink Panther
The Alamo
The Magnificent Seven
The Wild Bunch
What's Up Doc?
Crimebusters
Fellini Satyricon
Revenge of the Pink Panther
Rollerball

Warner's Classic Collection

(Original productions)

All at £19.95 each
Angels With Dirty Faces
Casablanca
Dark Victory
Dial M For Murder
42nd Street
House Of Wax
I Confess
Now Voyager
Key Largo
Public Enemy
Strangers On A Train
Tall Story
The FBI Story
The Adventures of Robin Hood
The Maltese Falcon
The Misfits
The Prince & The Showgirl
The Wrong Man
Mister Roberts
Young Man With A Horn
Treasure Of Sierra Madre

Jane Fonda Workouts

All at £19.95 each

1. Jane Fonda Workout
2. Jane Fonda's Pregnancy,
Birth & Recovery
3. Jane Fonda's Workout — The Challenge.

LATEST Popular Titles

All at £49.95 each
Romancing The Stone
The Natural 1984
Night Patrol
Bachelor Party
The Hotel New Hampshire
Conan The Destroyer
Dune
Trancers
Once Upon a Time in America
Sheena
Champions
Firestarter
The Bounty
The Philadelphia Experiment
Ninja III
Party Animal

All at £44.95 each
Kings & Desperate Men
The Evil That Men Do
Death Ride to Osaka Misunderstood
Rhinstone
Final Mission
The Cartier Affair
Rolling Thunder
The Highest Honour

All at £42.50 each
Terror in the Aisles
Hullabaloo
Fast Forward
The Company of Wolves
Against All Odds
The Streetfighter
Lawrence of Arabia

All at £39.95 each
Family Secrets
Lace 2
Between Friends
Midnight Express
Walking The Edge
Stripes
The Toy
Hercules (Feringo)
Pride & Prejudice (2 parts)

PARAMOUNT & UNIVERSAL

FROM C.I.C.

DRAMA All at £24.95 each.

Streets of Fire
The Godfather
The Godfather Part II
Chinatown
Night Hawks
Serpico
Eddie Macon's Run
The Hunter
That Man Bolt
Death Wish
48 Hours
The Warriors
Jaws II
Psycho
The Birds
Frenzy

COMEDY — £24.95 each

Top Secret
The Jerk
Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid
The Meaning of Life
Meatballs
Animal House
Fast Times at Ridgemount High
Some Kind of Hero
Bustin' Loose
1941
Play It Again Sam
Smokey & The Bandit
Smokey & The Bandit 2
Smokey & The Bandit 3
SCI-FI — £24.95 each
Star Trek — The Motion Picture
Star Trek 2 — The Wrath of Khan
Star Trek 3 — Search for Spock
Battlestar Galactica
Mission Galactica —
Cyclon Attack
Conquest of the Earth
The War of the Worlds
Buck Rogers in the 25th Century
Barbarella
Star Trek — Space Seed/Changeling
Star Trek — Miri/Empath
Star Trek — Whom Gods Destroy/
Platos Stepchildren

All Brand New Video Tapes!

Prices!

on Video!

Movies

LATEST Popular Titles

CLASSICS—£23.95 each

Dracula (Lugosi)
All Quiet on the Western Front (1933)
Creature From the Black Lagoon
Duck Soup (Marx Bros)
Animal Crackers (Marx Bros)
It Came From Outer Space
Road to Utopia
Scarface (Paul Muni)
Sunset Boulevard
For Whom the Bell Tolls
Coming Soon
Romance With a Double Bass

Where the Buffalo Roam
The Trouble with Harry (Hitchcock)
Stroker Ace
Badge 373
It Came From Hollywood
(A collection of the worst movies ever made)
Hawaiian Heat
Rope (Hitchcock)
Savage Islands
Rear Window
Vertigo

CIC TOP LINERS

All at £32.50 each
The Great Waldo Pepper
Downhill Racer
Slaughterhouse Five
The Don Is Dead
Borsalino
Anne of the 1000 Days
The Great Northfield
Minnesota Raid
Never Give an Inch
The Greatest Show on Earth
The Adventurers
Knight Rider

All at £42.50 each
The Keep Tank
Repo Man
Cloak & Dagger
Crackers
The River Rat
Heroes
The Joy of Sex
The Bastard
Scarface (Pacino)
Videodrome
Psycho 2
The Thing
Lords of Discipline
Private Lessons
Mandingo
Lipstick
Foul Play

FABULOUS MGM MUSICALS

—'More Stars Than There are in Heaven'

All at £24.95 each
An American in Paris
Ziegfeld Follies
The Pirate
Meet Me in St Louis
Kismet
Rosemarie
Showboat
Brigadoon
Singin' in the Rain
High Society

Silk Stockings
Seven Brides for Seven Brothers
Easter Parade
On the Town
Bandwagon
Gigi
Anchors Aweigh
The Great Caruso
The Barclays of Broadway
Les Girls
Kiss Me Kate

Fawlty Towers • Spitting Image

Fawlty Towers

— John Cleese, Prunella Scales,
Andrew Sachs and Connie Booth
Each 90 minute cassette incl
3 x 30 minute episodes—
ONLY £24.95 each.
Cassette 1—The Germans plus
The Hotel Inspectors and A Touch of Class Cassette 2—The Psychiatrist plus
The Builders and The Wedding Party

Cassette 3—The Kipper &
The Corpse plus Waldorf Salad and Gourmet Night
Cassette 4—Basil the Rat plus Communication Problems and The Anniversary.

Spitting Image Hilarious
Send-Up series £24.95 each.
Spit—With Polish
Rubber Thingies
A Floppy Mass of Blubber

MARTIAL ARTS.

Ten Tigers of Shaolin
Secret Shaolin Kung Fu
Shaolin Invincible Sticks
The Way of Kung Fu
4 exciting 90 minute features. Kung Fu at it's very best! All 4 Tapes—£40 only.

American Professional Wrestling
Shows 1, 2, 3, and 4.
Each 60 minute cassette packed with all-action grappling. £12 each show.
All Four Tapes—£40 only.

Abbott & Costello Cartoons
Super quality 60 minute Hanna Barbera cartoons—£12 each.
1. Cartoon Capers 2. Comic Cartoons
Both Tapes—£20 only.

THORN/EMI—Star Series

All at £26.95 each

Monty Python Live at—
Hollywood Bowl
Halloween II
Tattoo
Raging Moon
Valdez the Halfbreed (Bronson)
The Four Feathers (Dean Bridges)
Southern Comfort
Raid on Entebbe
Pumping Iron
Percy's Progress
The Land That Time Forgot
Shalako
Time Bandits
Buffalo Bill & The Indians
To The Devil a Daughter
Honky Tonk Freeway
The Valachi Papers (Bronson)
Aces High
Arabian Adventure
At The Earth's Core
The Awakening
Big Bad Mama
Bluebeard
Britannia Hospital
Butterfly
Chanel Solitaire
Conduct Unbecoming
Cross Of Iron
Death On The Nile
The Deerhunter
Don't Look Now
Driver
The Elephant Man
Evil Under The Sun
Far From The Madding Crowd
Flash Gordon

The Go-Between Hoffman
Hopscotch
It Shouldn't Happen to a Vet
The Jazz Singer
King Kong
Lady Caroline Lamb
The Long Good Friday
The Man Who Fell to Earth
The Man Who—
Haunted Himself
Memoirs of a Survivor
The Mirror Crack'd
The Life of Brian
Murder on the Orient Express
Nickelodeon
One Flew Over The—
Cuckoos Nest
Orca—Killer Whale
Percy
Ragtime
The Railway Children
Ransom
Silver Bears
SOS Titanic
Spys
Swallows & Amazons
Sweeney 1
Sweeney 2
Tales of Beatrix Potter
Times Square
Tom Jones
To The Devil a Daughter
Villain
Warlords of Atlantis
Watership Down
Welcome to Blood City
The Wicker Man

SELECTED ADULT FILMS

All at £49.95 each

Breathless
Emmanuelle 4
Lonely Lady
Fake Out
Intimate Moments
Gwendoline
Caligula
All at £42.50 each
The Streetwalker
Empire of Passion
Heat (Warhol)
Flesh (Warhol)
Man of Flowers
Sebastiane
Passion d'Amore
All at £39.95 each
Confessions of a—
Driving Instructor
Confessions of a Pop Performer
Hot Times
Fallen Angel
Lady Chatterley's Lover
Laura—Shadows of Summer
Beach Girls
Fritz The Cat
Heavy Traffic
The Fruit is Ripe
De Sade
Caged Fury
Giselle
Alexandra—Queen of Sex
Cousins in Love
The Lacemaker
Strangers in Love
Jailbirds
Joy
The Story of Linda
Adventures in Bondage
Born Innocent
The Seduction
Spring Fever
Vixen (Russ Meyer)

Emmanuelle (Original)
Electric Blue—The Movie
Paul Raymonds Revuebar
Paul Raymonds Erotica
Ugly George Special
Sex Maniacs Guide to USA
Sensual Fire
Fanny Hill
Female Mud Wrestling
Goodbye Emmanuelle

All at £39.95 each

Ring of Desire
Flesh & Lace
Body Talk
The Hotter They Come
Ball Games
Sex Boat
Young Passions
Casanova II
Las Vegas Girls
Talent
Up 'N Coming
Hot Shots
Lip Service
Playgirl
Deep Feelings
Nude Celebrity Special
Girls of Penthouse
Heaven's Touch
Sweet Dreams

All at £29.95 each

Electric Blue 'Big Ones'
Electric Blue 'Bra Busters'
Pat Wynn—'Breast Wishes'
Nude Jello Wrestling
Nude Wives Extravaganza
Mondo Topless (Russ Meyer)
Faster Pussycat (Meyer)

All at £19.95 each

BIG BOOBS SPECIAL
HOUSEWIFE STRIP SPECIAL

NEW RELEASES

More Super Titles from Warner

City Heat (Eastwood &
Burt Reynolds)—£49.95
The Pope of Greenwich Village £49.95
Mike's Murder—49.95
The Rise & Fall of Legs
Diamond—£35.00
Across 110th Street—£35.00
Report to the Commissioner—£19.95

Bank Shot—£19.95
Electra Glide in Blue—£19.95

PLUS SELECTED BLOCKBUSTERS

Wild Geese II—£49.95
C.H.U.D.—£49.95
Dirty Dozen—Next Mission—£49.95
Mussolini & I—£44.50
The Grey Fox—£42.50
McGuigan vs Pedroza—£19.95

★VHS & BETA Formats

★Prompt Post-Free
Delivery

★Illustrated Catalogue
our complete listing of over 2,000 specially selected titles is available at only £1
— free with purchase

★Exchange Services
see catalogue for details

MORE ADULT FILMS LISTED IN CATALOGUE:

ALL TCX TITLES AVAILABLE AT £34.95

ALL CALVISTA TITLES—
£19.95 each

ELECTRIC BLUE 1-19
Available at only £29.95 each.

Please send me the following videos at the budget prices stated.
I require VHS ☐ BETAMAX ☐ cassettes

Catalogue £1 ☐ Free with purchase

I enclose cheque/PO's for £ _____ OR debit my Access/Amex/Diners

Account number _____

Signed _____

Name _____

Address _____

SPECIAL OFFERS

ALL
BRAND
NEW!

ONLY—
£12 EACH.

FORD

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 29

what could kindly be referred to as 'the trots': The crew was in the middle of shooting a wild chase through a desert bazaar, which was to climax with Jones having a spectacular sword-fight with an Arab warrior, but Ford kept having to rush off to the little boy's room, so director Steven Spielberg decided to tear a page out of the script and have Indy pull out a gun and shoot his opponent instead. It became one of those classic 'scenes you always wanted to see' and always gets a big laugh wherever the film is shown.

After Raiders, nobody was going to ask Harrison Ford to play a villain any more, but he did get a chance to play a different kind of hero in Ridley Scott's stunningly visual 1982 science fiction thriller Blade Runner (Warner). As a down at heel private detective tracking down a band of murderous artificial humans in a bleak future society, he gave his character a depth and complexity that was perfectly in keeping with the movie's thoughtful script and densely textured look. But audiences failed to respond to the erstwhile Han Solo and Indiana Jones as somebody who might be in the least bit human and fallible, and the 27 million dollar production died at the box office.

That Jones boy.

After this he agreed to play Han Solo again in the third of George Lucas' Star Wars series, realising what would be his final commitment to the character that first made him a household name. Return of the Jedi (CBS/Fox-1983) was in many ways the most spectacular and satisfying of the trilogy, but it didn't offer much of a role to Ford. His character did get the girl at the end, but for most of the movie's running time was called upon to do little more than supply incidental comic relief while Mark Hamill's Luke Skywalker dominated the narrative. In fact Ford did try to persuade Lucas to make it more interesting by allowing Solo to come to a sticky end: 'The way I saw it,' said the star, 'Han Solo was very dispensable — he had no mother, no father, no history. But George didn't agree!'

He was happier to get back to his bullwhip and battered hat and go off adventuring again in Steven Spielberg and George Lucas' Indiana Jones And The Temple of Doom (1984), because this spectacular sequel to Raiders offered him centre stage all the way through, and he felt 'much more comfortable' in the character. Like many of today's more successful sequels, Temple of Doom reworked all the elements that made the original such a huge hit — serving them up bigger and better! Thus in the first ten minutes Indy seems to go through more hair-raising perils than he did in the entire of the previous film. Many critics felt that this was a case of overkill, but the public didn't agree and it became an even bigger moneyspinner than the first.

Replicant hunter Decker.

His screen outings as Han Solo and Indiana Jones had made Ford a very wealthy man — he was reputed to have earned at least ten million dollars from Temple alone — but they didn't bring him much praise from the critics. 'I've always been reviewed as some kind of phenomenon,' he complained. 'But I've never thought "Well this is just a two-dimensional comic-book character, so I'll not have to work on it." I've always suffered greatly, worrying about what I was going to do, and doing my best.' He obviously wanted to be taken seriously as an actor, but for that to happen he had to find exactly the right role, in a film boasting neither gimmicks nor costly special effects.

He finally found what he was looking for in the script for a contemporary thriller called Witness (CIC). It was only his enthusiasm for the screenplay that persuaded Paramount to finance the twelve million dollar picture and hire the acclaimed Australian filmmaker Peter (Picnic At Hanging Rock) Weir to direct it. Never had the star's commitment to a movie been stronger — he even stayed on with Weir to see the editing process through — and the result was one of the best thrillers of the 80s, which brought Harrison Ford into the limelight as an actor at last. He had scrupulously prepared for his part of tough Philadelphia detective John Book, even going to the length of attending all-night sessions with the Philadelphia police department homicide squad, and it showed on screen in a performance that most critics saw as Oscar material.

The film opens with a brutal murder in a Philadelphia train station, which is witnessed by a small boy (Lukas Haas) and his newly widowed mother (Kelly McGillis) who come from an Amish community — the Pennsylvania Dutch folk who live and dress in an 18th century manner. Ford's John Book investigates, only to discover that the killing has been committed by high members of his own department who have become involved in the drug trade. With a fellow policeman out to get him the hunter becomes the hunted and the wounded Book is forced to take refuge with mother and son in the closed Amish farming community, where a relationship develops between him and McGillis. But the killers are closing in...

Witness has shown people that there's a lot more to Harrison Ford than just action man heroics, and though he has said that he will undoubtedly do another Indiana Jones movie it seems likely that he will mainly be opting for more serious subjects in the future, now that he's proved he is capable of handling them so well. Whatever the case may be, Ford has a commonsense attitude to his profession and is not a man given to regrets 'It's today and now that counts' he says, 'not what was yesterday or will be tomorrow. Failures are inevitable, it's just unfortunate that they live forever — 40 feet wide, 20 feet high! That's the price in this business.' And when you're as big as Han Solo, Indiana Jones and John Book you can afford to pay it!

VW